

KELA PARKER

AMERICAN SINGER-SONGWRITER

ABOUT KELA PARKER

Born in Berkeley, California, Kela (pronounced "Kell-a, like "hella") Parker started making music in Portland, Oregon, where she got her start playing her quirky piano compositions at the Old Church and opening for Madeleine Peyroux at the Aladdin Theatre. She has since played her genre-defying blend of art and folk music coast to coast, from Seattle's Royal Room, Los Angeles' Viper Room, to New York's Rockwood Music Hall.

Currently residing in Los Angeles, the singer-songwriter's three full-length albums and various singles have been hailed for their singular sound, which has deep musical roots while also feeling of the moment. "Like folk music," in the words of engineer Victor Nash, "but folk music from a country you've never heard of before."
